FEATURED SESSIONS

Tour of Lippert's Finishing Operations

We will tour Lippert's Plant 72, a 240,000 square foot facility that houses multiple finishing operations including one of the largest non-captive zinc phosphate and electrocoat systems in North America. Its 35,000-gallon processing tanks can accommodate parts approximately 4 feet wide, 8.5 feet deep, 50 feet long, and up to 7,000 pounds of weight. We will also see the powder coating and paint lines. The paint line has CARC (chemical agent resistant coating) capabilities that are used exclusively by the US military and other government contracts. In addition, Plant 72 offers both cathodic acrylic and cathodic epoxy coatings that meet 45 different OEM and military paint specifications. The facility also has a pickle/de-rust process, that removes rust and scale from material prior to coating.

Managing Conflict: Turn Fight, Flight or Freeze into Calm, Confident and Productive

Kimberly Lisiak

Director of Leadership Development Lippert

Have you ever walked away from a difficult conversation feeling completely deflated? Imagine being able to step into the ring and rumble through a difficult conversation feeling calm, confident, and productive.

Unmanaged stress resulting from conflict leads to three biological responses: fight, flight, or freeze. In this session, you will identify your natural biological response and how to use this information to your advantage. Tactics to manage the stress of conflict will be explored including how to prepare for conflict physically, mentally, and emotionally. Learn about the physiological reactions to emotional stress, tips to minimize these reactions, and build an arsenal of tools to implement "real time." The benefits of leaning into productive difficult conversations and the importance of healthy "storming" among a group to grow as a team will also be covered. Lastly, we will discuss the empathy required to deal with difficult people and steps to take when conversations might not go as planned.

World Class Operations Driven by a Culture of Change

Jason Lippert President & CEO

Lippert

Lippert stands by their mantra of Everyone Matters. They believe business can and should be a force for good in the world. Learn how their focus on leadership and culture development has made a drastic impact on attrition over the last five years and the positive impact this has had on quality, safety, efficiency, and innovation in their business.

This journey has also led them to understand that better leadership and work culture has a powerful influence on people's mental and physical health. As a result, Lippert makes it their business to send people home happier and healthier so they can live more fulfilled lives that positively contribute to their families and local communities.

Creating the Structure for Accountability

Lee Ann Schwope Cochran Partner

Amphora Consulting

Accountability in the workplace is linked to an increase in employee morale and commitment to work. Ownership and initiative are core to accountability and found in many of our employees; however, accountability is lacking in many workplaces. While it seems creating an environment driven around accountability would be simple, why is it lacking in many organizations? Together we will discuss how to make accountability a core part of your culture and core value of your team. In this session we will cover:

- What is accountability?
- Main reasons leaders and managers don't hold others accountable.
- Important factors that contribute to creating a structure and environment encouraging accountability.
- Leadership behaviors necessary to increase accountability.
- Action plan for results.

I really enjoyed this event! It was awesome to have such a strong group of women to learn and grow from; it was a very inspiring group. - 2019 Attendee

Embracing Market and Technology Trends in Industrial Finishing

Shelley Bausch

Senior Vice President, Global Industrial Coatings Axalta Coating Systems

Our finishing industry continues to grow exponentially. This is due to the continued drive to protect and beautify surfaces while offering flexibility in design and materials of construction in the end application. We serve a multitude of markets, including automotive, furniture, construction equipment, building products, industrial equipment and power supply, oil and gas and energy solutions, electronics, and many more! In all markets, customers are demanding better surface protection, more customizable color solutions, improved durability, and increased appearance. In addition, demands for sustainable finishing practices in the coating and application, and the demand to do that on new and evolving substrates is both an opportunity and a challenge!

By understanding and embracing these trends as opportunities, we can advance our industry in terms of performance, quality, costs, safety, and environmental impact and drive the finishing industry to even greater growth. Markets continue to expand and evolve, and the demands of the finishing industry must evolve with them. Those of us that understand, embrace, and advance with it will be the leaders of the future.

Networking Events

The FORUM will begin with a Welcome Reception giving attendees the opportunity to meet and socialize with fellow FORUM participants during this casual event. Tuesday evening will feature a Networking Dinner giving attendees the opportunity to continue conversations about the day's session in a relaxed environment.

Be sure to stay for the FORUM Closing Lunch on Wednesday afternoon. Back by popular demand, Dr. Amber Selking will give the final keynote presentation which will no doubt energize and empower attendees to implement what they've learned into their personal and professional lives.

Sales Strategies to Close that Deal, Get that Promotion, and More!

Leslee Robinson Sales Representative Cardinal Paint & Powder

Whether we are designated as sales in our working profession or not, the reality is we are all selling most of our waking hours. Whether it be selling products for our employers, services to potential customers, our skillset and experience for a promotion, dinner to the picky eaters in our homes, or vacation ideas to our traveling partners – we are constantly selling to a diverse group of "customers."

Throughout her extensive sales career, Leslee has discovered being successful in sales is much more about relationships and listening than it is the hard sell of price, price, price. People want to be heard, valued, respected, and remembered. She's faced a variety of challenges including being taken seriously in the workplace, learning how to react (or not react) to stressful or uncomfortable situations, and keeping emotions in check. In this session, she will share anecdotes, valuable tips, and strategies to help your customers REMEMBER you!

A Feminine Touch in a Masculine World: Why Manufacturing Needs the Healthiest Version of You

Dr. Amber Selking

Vice President of Leadership and Culture Lippert

Lippen

The world of manufacturing, historically dominated by men, is poised to be graced by a feminine touch. In a society where labels like "masculine" and "feminine" are seemingly polar opposites, our world is positioned to be awakened by the nuances of gender differences and how they can be optimized to drive organizational performance. But that requires both men and women to understand the strengths of one another, and individually commit to becoming the very healthiest versions of themselves so they can positively impact their team and the company.

Gaining a community of women with a variety of backgrounds but with the common connection of a career in finishing/ manufacturing was invaluable, and the sessions were engaging and informative. I truly appreciated the time spent at the FORUM and I look forward to attending again in the future!" ______ 2019 Attendee
